Recognising and honouring the best scientific research authored by a pharmacy student

During the 21st EAHP congress, in Vienna 2016, EAHP will once again offer the Student Science Award to one or several European Pharmaceutical Student Association (EPSA) students, hence recognising and honouring the best scientific research authored by a pharmacy student. This award recognises a student's significant intellectual contribution which promotes the state of the art in hospital pharmacy and pharmaceutical research methods or theories.

EPSA students and members are invited, through their organisation to submit abstracts to an EAHP-EPSA jury, who will select the best abstracts, which will then be developed into full scientific articles out of which the best article will win the Student Science Award. The winning research will be presented during the 21st Congress of the EAHP in Vienna and published in the European Journal of Hospital Pharmacy (EJHP).
