The COVID-19 pandemic impacted hospital pharmacy’s workload. We could have made more timesaving decisions such as the use of commercially available methylprednisolone instead of dexamethasone and batching remdesivir preparations. Hospital pharmacists should be involved in developing national guidelines and take into account the impact on daily practice.